ne of the biggest events in Miami's history - and the nation's - is happening this year. It's the Summit of the Americas, an historic event that will raise Miami's global profile as an international business center.

When they arrive in Miami, heads of state from throughout the Western Hemisphere will be meeting for the first time in more than a generation. It also will be the first-ever hemispheric meeting of democratically elected leaders.

"Miami is an ideal site for this meeting," said President Bill Clinton in his March 11 announcement that the city had been selected as the summit site. "Miami's economy is fully integrated with the economies of Latin America and the Caribbean in so many ways it represents the promise of hemispheric integration."

The President also said Miamians have shown tremendous resolve to work together as a community since Hurricane Andrew in August 1992.

"I have been deeply moved ... to see the heroic efforts that people have made, to deal not only with the aftermath of the hurricane, but to build a genuine multiracial, multicultural society that would be at the crossroads of the Americas - and therefore at the forefront of the future," the President said,

"Our best hopes to do things that democracies find difficult to do - to get people together, to cross racial and economic and ethnic lines - lies in the efforts we are making in Miami right now. In December, we will have a great gathering in a place that can symbolize the future toward which we are all tending."

Miami edged out Los Angeles, New York, Chicago, San Diego and several cities in Latin America to be the host site of the Summit of the Americas.

"Miami's selection signals its emergence as a model multi-cultural community of the Americas, and its ascendancy as a world class international city for business, trade, education, health care, culture and recreation. Miami has become a meeting place for the Americas," says John C. Anderson, president of The Beacon Council, the economic development organization of Miami and Dade County.

This hemispheric summit will be the first of its kind since 1967, when a similar conference was held in 1967 in the Uruguayan resort town of Punta del Este. A model for the Miami meeting will be the Pacific Basin Summit held in 1963 in Seattle, Washington.

As President Clinton described the importance of the summit to U.S. citizens, here highlighted the economic currents that are propelling businesses in Dade County, Florida.
"Our nation has a major stake in the prosperity and freedom of the entire hemisphere," he said. "Our exports to Latin America and the Caribbean have more than doubled in just seven years, rising to nearly $80 billion in 1993, and that has generated hundreds of thousands of new jobs for American workers. If we can continue to bring down hemispheric trade barriers, we can create a million new jobs by the turn of the century."

Florida Governor Lawton Chiles said Miami is "the best city in the Western Hemisphere for this conference.

The governor — along with Florida Lieutenant Governor Buddy McKay, U.S. Senator Bob Graham and the rest of the Florida congressional delegation -- waged a vigorous campaign to make Miami the summit site.

"They demonstrated the real sensible arguments on behalf of Miami," said Vice President Al Gore, who will consult with heads of state in Bolivia, Argentina and Brazil in advance of the summit. "It's a world-class community.'

In the last 20 years, international business activity has enabled Miami to evolve from a sleepy tourist town to a cosmopolitan commercial center.

Some new jobs in Dade County still are being created by companies that are rebuilding, repairing and cleaning up in the wake of Hurricane Andrew. But the hurricane's effect on Miami employment is declining, while the impact of international trade and tourism is growing.

What's really driving the Miami economy is international business activity, constantly generating new opportunities for accountants, bankers, distributors, film companies, hoteliers, manufacturers, merchandise traders, movie producers just about anyone living and working in Miami.

Those are some of the reasons Miami is uniquely qualified to host the Summit of the Americas, a gathering that could produce new breakthroughs in hemispheric harmony.

President Clinton said two broad themes will be discussed at the summit: "First, how to strengthen our democracies, defend them collectively and improve our governments. Second, how to promote economic growth while advancing a strategy of sustainable development that protects the environment and alleviates poverty."

The President underscored the historic timing of the Summit of the Americas.

"We've arrived at a moment of very great promise and great hope for the Western Henusphere," he said. "Democratic values are ascending. Our economies are growing and becoming more intertwined everyday through trade and investment. Now we have a unique opportunity to create a new community of free nations."

There is a strong sense of community in Miami itself, Governor Chiles said, and it will be showcased during the Summit of the Americas.

"You are coming to a place that has become a community. Through Hurricane Andrew, we have found in South Florida that we all need each other — whether we're black or white, whether we speak English,

Spanish,
Creole or any one of 28
other languages we teach in our schools. This community came together in an effort to rebuild, and from that, I think we have a totally different focus. We will demonstrate that focus at this hemispheric conference. This will be a world-class event."

It also will be a world-peace event. Enhanced security is one of the many benefits of increased trade relationships and diplomatic ties, President Clinton said. "The rising tide of democracy in this hemisphere helps make us more secure," the President said. "Democracies tend not to fight each other, they make better partners in trade and diplomacy. This summit will advance our common efforts and our shared interests."

U.S. Customs Service in Miami. Shorter lines and better service earned the Customs Service in Miami a national performance review award, presented last March 28 by Vice President Al Gore. On average, international passengers arriving at Miami International Airport spend only seven minutes in Customs.

The Port of Miami, the world's largest passenger cruise port, also keeps the Customs staff very busy.

Miami's seaport handled 5.2 million tons of cargo in 1993 - double the level of six years ago - and it retained its status as the world's largest port for cruise lines, with more than 3 million passengers passing through the turnstiles last year.

Two leading cruise lines based in Miami, Carnival and Royal Caribbean are emerging as dominant competitors in the cruise industry, mainly because of their ability to buy new ships. Publicly traded shares of both Carnival and Royal Caribbean soared more than 50 percent in market value in 1993.

The largest shipping line in the world, Maersk Inc., saved money by expanding in Miami.

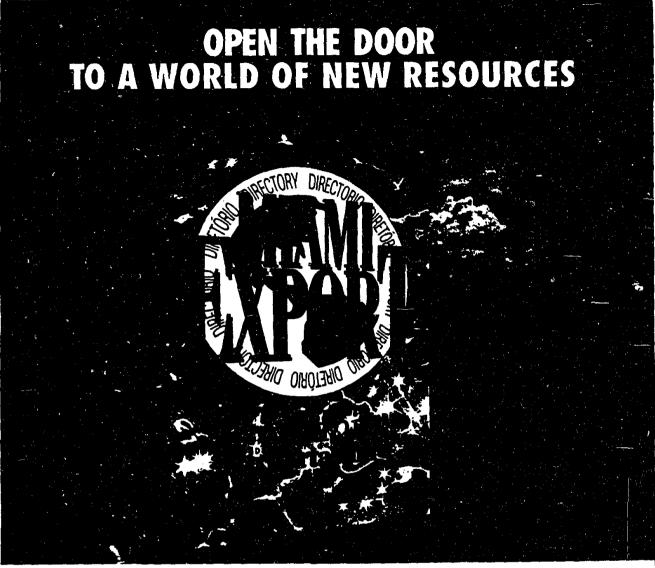

For years, Maersk trucked Florida citrus to Charleston, South Carolina, where it was put into sea containers and shipped to Asia. But last year, Maersk Inc. moved its citrus-shipping operation from Charleston to Miami. Now the company ships Florida grapefruit, oranges and lemons to Asia via the Port of Miami. Company officials say the move cut transit time by two days.

Cruise and cargo lines support a wide variety of businesses. For example, the growing use of steel and aluminum containers that carry ocean freight between South Florida and Latin America has spawned a service industry in Miami: about a dozen companies that store, clean and repair containers.

The concentration of shipping and warehousing facilities in Miami is constantly creating new business opportunities. One recent example: In March, unroasted coffee imported and stored in South Florida was designated as the basis for futures contracts traded on the Coffee, Sugar & Cocoa Exchange in New York. The upshot: a likely increase of 50 to 100 percent in the amount of coffee handled by Miami's shipping and warehousing companies.

Another record number of overnight visitors

Miami attracts a non-stop flow of visitors. Dade County's annual number of overnight visitors is approximately four times larger than the county's permanent population.

The county's overnight-visitor count increased to 8.8 million people in 1993, up from 8.5 million in 1992 — keeping intact an unbroken string of annual increases in Dade's overnight-visitor population that dates back to the mid-1980s.

For the second year in a row, international visitors outnumbered domestic visitors — a reflection of the new economic strength of many Latin American nations. Of the total number of overnight visitors, 61 percent were international in 1993, up from 55 percent in 1992.

Europe continues as the primary source of foreign visitors to Dade County, accounting for about 30 percent of the total in 1993, with 25 percent from South America, 23 percent from the Caribbean, 11 percent from Canada and 9 percent from Central America.

A little more than half of the overnight visitors in 1993 came to Greater Miami for leisure. About one-fourth came here for conventions and business meetings.

Miami is building for the future, not resting on its laurels. This year, the city plays international host to one of the biggest annual dealmaking sessions in the travel industry. It's called Pow Wow, an international showcase for U.S. travel services. Each year Pow Wow attracts an elite mix of foreign tour operators, travel suppliers and travel writers to one lucky city in the United States.

One-eighth of all foreign visitors to the United States purchase domestic hotel rooms and other travel services that are booked by tour operators during Pow Wow, according to estimates by the Travel Industry Association, the trade group that sponsors Pow Wow.

"Altogether, there will be over $2 billion of travel booked," says Merrett Stierheim, president of the Greater Miami Convention & Visitors Bureau. "The Travel Industry Association estimates that the bording if these is job should game."

over 10 percent of that business."

Meanwhile, the City of Miami Beach is following a plan to induce the development of a major hotel. "It's going to fly," Stierheim says. At the same time, he added,

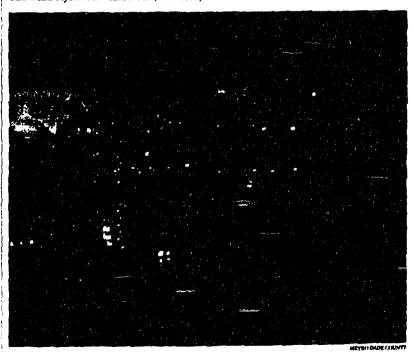

"we're seeing an acceleration of the refurbishment of existing hotels."

Hotel occupancy rates in Dade County consistently rank among the highest in Florida—a trend that is encouraging investors to consider Dade hotel developments.

To add further encouragement, about five acres of prime waterfront property has been offered at low cost, by the City of Miami Beach, for a major hotel development. The city's total incentive package, including land and city-backed bond financing, is valued at $60 million.

That announcement sparked responses from Marriott International, Hyatt Hotels, Donald Trump and other, hotel developers interested in building the planned 800-room hotel on the oceanfront, a short walk from the Miami Beach Convention Center. It would be the second-largest hotel in Dade County, after the famous 1,266-room Fontainebleau Hilton in Miami Bezch.

Multinational Miami

Blessed with a central location in the Western Hemisphere, Miami is a springboard for doing business in the Americas

n 1988, electronics giant Sony established a Miami-based subsidiary called Sony Broadcast Export Corp., which exports Japanese-made cameras professional video recorders and mixing consoles. "We sell to TV stations and recording studios throughout Latin America," says Glen Adamo, president of Sonv Broadcast. The company also sells large-screen TV systems for sports arenas.

Long a presence in Mexico, Sony Broadcast now is expanding into Chile and Argentina. "Another up-and-coming market has been Peru," Adamo says.

Miami offers an abundance of transportation advantages to a company like Sony Broadcast. "Miami is convenient," Adamo says, because if you want to go to Latin America, you've got to go through Miami anyway.

And the city's large bilingual population is another advantage, he says. "Our business is conducted mainly in Spanish.'

Since Sony's arrival, nearly 100 major multinational companies have moved into Dade County, many of them establishing a regional headquarters that focus on sales and marketing. At the same time, thousands of homegrown businesses have expanded Overseas.

Geography clearly is a major attraction. "If I have an emergency deal in Caracas, I can go there and be home in time for dinner tonight," says Jay Malina, president of Manufacturer's Export & Equity Group, a Miami-based company that helps U.S. manufacturing companies enter Latin American markets.

Among other ventures, Malina's company has formed an alliance with the accounting firm of Price Waterhouse to provide trade consulting services from Miami. "This office services the whole Price Waterhouse network all over the world," Malina says. Miami has the intrinsic expertise to do business in Latin America."

That expertise is complemented by Miami's extraordinary capacity for moving people and packages around the world.

"Our airport has more international cargo than any other airport in the country, and our seaport has more routes to Latin America than any other seaport in the world," says Manny Mencia, vice president/Latin America, for The Beacon Council, Dade County's economic development organization.

"Just as important is the human infrastructure," Mencia said. In such fields as international law and trade financing and political risk analysis, Miami has some of the top practitioners in the world specializing in Latin America.

'It's the only city in the United States where you can not only access this wealth of expertise, but access it in your own language," Mencia said. "It's difficult to conceive of a place in the world where you could be more strategically located."

Many Fortune 500 companies agree. Apple Computer, AT&T and Disney are among the big corporate names serving Latin American, Caribbean, European and Asian markets from corporate offices throughout the Miami area. Many of them have business addresses in scenic Coral Gables, just south of the city of Miami.

Many of them are relative newcomers to Miami. The Beacon Council surveyed 332 multinational companies in Greater Miami (defined as those with a physical presence in two or more countries) and found that about 50 percent of them had established their Miami operations since 1980.

In December 1993, telecommunications giant AT&T Corp. announced its decision to put a regional headquarters in Coral Gables. The office serves long-distance customers in Canada, the Caribbean and Latin America - markets that collectively account for a growing share of AT&T's total revenue.

"What you find in Latin America is a need to move quickly to participate in the global economy. In order to do that, they need to drastically improve their infrastructure, says Barry Johnson, director of corporate affairs for AT&T in Florida.

"We see Miami as a very strategic city,"

Multinational companies - those with a physical presence in two or more countries - are common in Miami. A survey of hundreds of Dade County multinational companies shows that many are clustered in hanking, airlines, electronics, freight forwarding, wholesale trade and hospitality. The survey also shows that nearly half of Miami's multinational companies are regional headquarters operations.

says Johnson, adding that "we explored a number of other markets both in the United States and Latin America."

Johnson says AT&T was drawn in large part by Miami's status as the unofficial capital of Latin America — where AT&T employment has zoomed from 2,000 to 10,000 since 1985. In a region where national pride is paramount, Miami stands out as an attractive neutral location for doing business. "Miami is seen as the Switzerland of the Americas," Johnson says.

In many cases, the major multinational companies moving into Miami are bringing their vendors, suppliers and advisers along with them.

For example, Young & Rubicam Inc., a major New York marketing and communications company, has announced plans to invest $25 million in a Miami-based Latin American division that will offer advertising, public relations and direct marketing services. One of Young & Rubicam's largest clients is AT&T Corp., which plans to spend $15 million on marketing in Latin America in 1994.

Miami also has become the platform for global hospitality companies. The Inter-Continental Hotel chain, with 130 hotels in 53 countries around the world, picked Miami in 1992 as the headquarters site for the company's Americas Division—largely because Miami is the best base for launching an expansion into Latin America, company officials said. The Americas Division accelerated its growth this year through a new partnership with prestigious Presidente Hotels in Mexico.

"When it came down to it," says J.T. Kuhlman, president of Inter-Continental Hotels, Americas Division, "Miami was the natural choice for a variety of reasons."

Other types of hospitality companies also have taken root in Miami. One is Interval International, a Miami-based company that operates a vacation-exchange service for a global network of more than 1,200 affiliated timeshare resorts in 55 countries and offers discounted travel services. The company's revenues exceed $60 million a year.

"First and foremost, Miami offers us a well-educated, multilingual and multicultural work force able to communicate with our clients throughout the Western Hernsphere," mays Craig Nash, president of Interval International.

"I was born in Coral Gables and reside there today," he says. "I've seen Miami transformed from a sleepy little southern tourist town to a global hub. What has made Miami an international gateway is the sophistication of the people who have come here from all over the world — especially from Latin America."

Why in Miami? "Sometimes it's a political reason. Rather than choose one country over another, they choose Miami," says Michael Silver, an industrial real estate agent with CB Commercial. "Miami is seen as a neutral site.'

Wholesalers and retails also do business in Miami because it simply makes logistical and financial sense.

For example, Telular International of Buffalo Grove, Illinois, set up an office in Miami in February to oversee its entry into Latin American markets. The company is a leader in the manufacture of fixed wireless communications equipment. It's establishing distributorships throughout Latin America and offices in both Brazil and Argentina.

A growing volume of Florida exports- especially computers, vehicles, aircraft parts, office equipment and telecommunications gear - are flowing though the Miami Customs district into Venezuela, Colombia, Brazil, Argentina, Chile and other Latin destinations.

Other hot spots for Florida companies include the Central American nations of Costa Rica and Guatemala, and the Dominican Republic and Jamaica.

Total trade through Miami Customs jumped to $28 billion last year. There were twice as many exports as imports, in dollar terms.

Evidence of Miami's growing importance as an international distribution hub can be seen in the strong local market for warehouse space. In early 1994, the industrial vacancy rate in Dade County was about 4.5 percent, well below the range of 8 to 10 percent a few years ago.

In the area around Miami International Airport, warehouse lease rates are up. "Where2s a few years ago, you could rent space for $4.50 to $5 a square foot, you're now approaching $7 a square foot, which is at the top of the scale for dock-height warehouse facilities," says Michael Silver, an industrial real estate specialist with CB Commercial in Miami.

In Miami's retail trade, a number of the big players are looking overseas. Several of the city's largest retailers have a physical presence in Puerto Rico and are looking to expand elsewhere in Latin America.

A popular chain that sells recorded music, Spec's Music is increasing from two to six the number of stores it operates in Puerto Rico. Bentley's Luggage of Miami, which has three stores in Puerto Rico, also is planning further expansion there before entering other markets in Latin America and the Caribbean.

lbert Hernandez runs Skyner Worldwide Courier, a five-yearold global delivery service with 85 employees in Miami. "The business is exclusively international," Hernandez says, "and it's about 65 percent Latin American."

This year, to further distinguish Skyner from its competitors in the courier business, Hernandez made a simple offer to high-income Latin American business travelers who make frequent trips to the United States: Let us become your U.S.

Say you're a trilingual Brazilian banker, and you develop a likeing for "Golf" magazine and Sharper Image catalogues during your frequent trips to Miami — but you can't easily subscribe to the magazine or import merchandise from the catalogue, due to Brazilian postal problems and customs bottlenecks. Skyner alleviates those problems with a U.S. address. Your favorite American magazines and catalogs are mailed there, then immediately sent by Skyner courier to your home in Brazil —or just about anywhere else in the world. The bill shows up on your American Express card.

A large Latin market has been drawn to this unusual export service, co-developed by Skynet and American Express. "We call it SkyBox," Hernandez says. "We just sold over 3,000 SkyBoxes in a 45-day period." Skynet's revenue may hit $9 million this year, up from $7 million in 1993 — the year Skynet was recognized by Inc.

It's obvious that foreign tourism, trade and transportation are export-driven industries. Less clear is the broad scope of export activity in the courier business, education, architecture and many other professions. Service exports are difficult to measure, more elusive than merchandise exports. Government trade statistics shed little light on service exports.

Difficult though it may be to quantify, however, the export of services is what drives Dade County's economy.

"There has been an understandable emphasis on merchandise exports because you can count them, you can go see the boxes down at the pier," says John Anderson, president of The Beacon Council, Dade County's economic development organization.

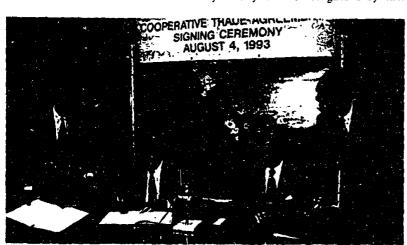

"But the area where we have unlimited potential is the export of services — legal services, engineering services, health care consulting, educational services and many others," Anderson says. "It's a thoughtdriven, brain-dependent type of activity."

The North American Free Trade Agreement is good news for service exporters like Skynet. The NAFTA treaty is likely to boost service exports to Mexico via Miami. "Where Miami is strong is in the services area," says Jerry Haar, senior research associate at the University of Miami's North-South Center, a leading organization for hemispheric policy research and studies.

Service exports come from many other industries and institutions in Dade County. Consider the University of Miami. The private university is a major exporter of services; many of its students are foreign citizens. About 13 percent of the university's enrollment is comprised of foreign students — one of the highest percentages among U.S. universities.

Southern Bell, the regional telephone company serving Miami, is also doing business overseas. "BellSouth International sells cellular and paging products throughout the world," says Joseph Lacher, Southern Bell's top executive in Florida. "We're in Australia, Venezuela and about 25 other countries."

America Tel Corp. is a Miami-based company that markets private telecommunications networks and sophisticated messaging services to multinational companies in Latin America. In one project, America Tel sold an on-line information system that transmits U.S.

China External Trade and Development Council and The Beacon Council sign a Cooperative Trade and Economic Development Agreement.

AmericaTel has penetrated Latin markets by entering into partnerships with companies in such nations as Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico and Venezuela. One of AmericaTel's largest investors is Entel, a private telephone company in Chile. "Our goal is to extend our network of partnerships throughout Latin America and the Caribbean," says Patricio Northland, president of AmericaTel.

Accountants in Miami handle plenty of foreign business, too. Large government privatization projects in Latin America often generate fees for major accounting firms in Miami.

William Pruitt is managing partner in Miami for Arthur Andersen, in charge of the accounting firm's operations in Florida, Puerto Rico and Venezuela. The Miami office has 250 professionals. About one-third of them are bilingual.

"We're probably getting 20 percent of our revenues from other countries," says Pruitt. "I suspect that percentage will continue to go up as Latin governments continue to privatize state-owned enterprises."

In one of its largest privatization projects, Arthur Andersen's Miami office handled the tax aspects of a public offering of stock in Panameo, a billion-dollar Coca Cola bottling and distribution business in Brazil, Colombia and Brazil.

The Miami office also did work for a large U.S. company, GTE Corp., in its acquistion of an interest in Venezuela's government-controlled telephone company. Another big GTE project may emerge in the future. "GTE may ultimately take the telephone company in Venezuela public," Pruitt says.

Lawyers also do a great deal of international business from Miami. For example, at the Paul Landy Beiley & Harper law firm, 40 percent of the annual billings come from international activity.

Throughout most of its 30-year history, international business at the Paul Landy Beiley law firm has been mostly "inbound"—foreign clients seeking U.S. visas, for example. But now, there is a growing number of "outbound" U.S. clients who need advice on foreign legal environments.

"We're advising more and more Florida businesses wanting to do business literally all over the world," says Burton Landy, founding member of the law firm.

Landy is getting help all over the world, too. In 1990, his law firm founded a global network of affiliated law firms called Terralax, based in Miami. "We now have 81 firms and about 3,800 lawyers in this network," Landy says. "This is how we can counsel a company all over the world with a law firm of only 30 lawyers."

Those lawyers and their support staff are representative of Miami's rich diversity. "We speak about a dozen languages here," Landy says. "In a typical day here, you'll see faxes in Japanese and Russian and, of course, lots of Spanish."

In addition to "inbound" and "outbound" international business in Miami's legal profession, Ruben Diaz adds a third category: "going through" business. "There is a significant amount of European investment into Latin America that comes through here," says Diaz, partner in the Miami law firm of Steel Hector & Davis.

Diaz says language barriers at other U.S. law firms often mean opportunities for Miami law firms.

He tells the story of a power-plant privatization project in Argentina. A major public utility in the United States wanted to make a bid to purchase. The law firm representing the utility had 400 lawyers—but not one high-level member who spoke Spanish. "Their corporate counsel called us," Diaz says.

Companies seeking legal help in Latin America need much more from lawyers than fluency in Spanish or Portuguese — "not just translations," Diaz says, "but agreements that really work. The translation is just not enough."

ndoscopy is a minimally invasive form of surgery, in which the physician makes a small incision in the body and operates with the aid of a miniature video camera. A Miami company, Symbiosis Corp., was formed by four young partners eager to capitalize on the growing popularity of this form of surgery. The partners rapidly turned Symbiosis into a major manufacturer of disposable endoscopic surgical instruments.

The business was started in 1988 with $5,000. Within three years, annual sales hit $15 million. One of the leaders is Kevin Smith. He quit his old job as senior engineer at Cordis Corp., a well-known, Miami-based biomedical manufacturer, to co-found Symbiosis and take over as chief executive officer. "We believe the minimally invasive surgery market is going to be the new wave of medicine," Smith predicted in a 1991 magazine interview. "We want to own that market, and I think we will."

Now Smith and the rest of the founders of Symbiosis can own just about anything they want. In 1992, they sold the company for $170 million.

Silicon Valley, meet Biomedical Beach. The business history of Miami is replete with chapters detailing huge success stories in biomedical manufacturing. And more are being written every day.

A native of Little Rock, Arkansas, Wallace Coulter and his brother invented an automated blood-analysis device in the 1940s, and they attracted a worldwide market that made their family rich. Today the largest manufacturer of any kind in Dade County is Coulter Corporation, which employs nearly 3,000 people in the county and rings up more than $600 million in annual revenue.

Phillip Frost is a native of Philadelphia who moved to Miami to join the University of Miami School of Medicine. He founded and ran a company called Key Pharmaceuticals, then sold the Miami-based business in 1986 for more than $800 million, including about $150 million for his own stock.

Now he's at it again. In 1987, Frost founded Ivax Corp., one of Miami's fastest-growing companies. Ivax is a generic-drug manufacturer and distributor with about $650 million in annual sales.

Acquisitions overseas have put Ivax into the United Kingdom and other foreign markets. Revenue from foreign markets now account for 15 percent of the company's total, Frost says, and could rise to as much as 30 percent in the next three to five years.

Cordis Corporation, founded in Miami in 1959, controls about 70 percent of the worldwide market for coronary catheters. In 1992, a national study found that Cordis owned more "high impact" patents than any other company in the nation. Annual revenues top $225 million a year.

Other biomedical companies that show promise include the following:

North American Biologicals Inc. generates annual revenues of $90 million, mostly from the sale of blood plasma. Nearly one-tenth of the world supply of plasma is collected by the Miami company at its 43 collection centers around the globe. The company also operates one of the nation's largest laboratories dedicated to screening blood for the AIDS virus. Under contract with the U.S. Department of Labor, the Department of Defense and the National Guard, NABI tests millions of federal employees annually for the AIDS virus.

In 1993, NABI won government permission to produce experimental quantities of a drug that stops transmission of the AIDS virus from a pregnant woman to her unborn child.

Noven Pharmaceuticals, reached a new milestone in early 1994. An approval letter was issued by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for its estrogen skin patch. The patch replaces estrogen in menopausal women, relieving hot flashes and other symptoms. About $1 billion worth of estrogen pills are sold annually worldwide. The company's chairman, Steve Sablotsky, says the estrogen market is growing as the baby boom generation ages. Stock analysts expect publicly held Noven to earn its first annual profit this year.

Baxter International, based in Deerfield, Illinois, has made significant investments in its Miami research laboratories, where Baxter scientists are trying to develop an artificial-blood substitute that could help alleviate blood shortages, as well as AIDS and hepatitis infections in donated blood.

Corvita Corporation makes artificial veins, which simplify the procedures involved in coronary bypass operations.

"We have achieved a critical mass in the health technology sector," says John Anderson, president of The Beacon Council. "We have a very livable community, which is a prerequisite to attract well-educated, skilled people."

Health Care Delivery in Miami and Abroad

Latin and Caribbean markets for U.S. medical treatment are expanding, creating new opportunities for hospitals

Advances in cardiovascular services bas made Miami a world class cardiae care provider.

f you're looking for a multicultural experience in Miami, few places can beat Jackson Memorial Hospital, where foreign graduate students enrolled in the University of Miami medical school often take care of Jackson's foreign patients.

"Our location in the Caribbean allows us to attract the very best scholars and graduate interns from the southern part of the Western Hemisphere," says Dr. Bernard Fogel, senior vice president for medical affairs and dean of the University of Miami School of Medicine.

"About a third of our internships and residencies go to graduates of the very best Central and South American medical schools. We've trained physicians in Haiti and the West Indies, too." Fogel says. "The process is very selective. We get hundreds of applications."

Upon graduation, "about 95 percent of them go back to practice in their countries, often as medical professors." And the UM medical school usually follows them, providing continuing education to graduates in their home countries.

When Cuban exiles began streaming into Miami in the 1960s, many of them enrolled in the medical school and worked at Jackson, bringing a wealth of health care expertise to South Florida. "We've been fortunate," Fogel says. "The University of Havana medical school is certainly among the finest in the Western Hemisphere."

Jackson is the sole county-supported hospital in Dade. It's the largest hospital of any kind in South Florida. And it's well-known in Latin America and the Caribbean. Many residents of Latin and Caribbean nations fly to Jackson for treatment.

"We get an awful lot of referrals from Brazil, Colombia, Peru, Ecuador and Venezuela," says Fogel.

Jackson is recognized worldwide as a first-class source of treatment of eye disorders, liver problems, spinal cord injuries and severe burns. One of fastest-growing specialities has been prostate cancer treatment; "we have an extraordinary referral base there," Fogel says.

Research is an important element of the medical school's operations. Example: In early 1994, UM's Diabetes Research Institute became the world's largest center for the study and treatment of diabetes. It moved into new quarters in February 1994 on the grounds of the University of Miami Medical School at Jackson Memorial Hospital. The institute's new home is a $15 million, 87,000-square-foot building with an international computer network that allows researchers around the globe α share information.

The institute is one of the world' leaders in transplanting pancreatic cells as: way of reversing diabetes. The cente employs Dr. Camillo Ricordi, an Italia researcher who invented a machine tha isolates large numbers of insulin-producing cells from the pancreas. He heads up th institute's cell transplant program.

This year, Jackson is joining three not for-profit hospitals in an agreement to combine their marketing resources an aggressively position Miami as a medical services destination in Latin America markets. The four hospitals — Jackson Mercy Hospital, Baptist Hospital an Mount Sinai Medical Center — ar planning an October 1994 medic; conference that's expected to draw 70 physicians in Caracas, Venezuelá.

Specialties will be prominently displayed. Treatment of diabetes will be the highligh of presentations by Mercy Hospita Mount Sinai Medical Center in Mian Beach will talk about cardiac care. "We do more cardiac surgery than any other hospital in South Florida," says Fred Hir chief executive of 707-bed Mount Sinai.

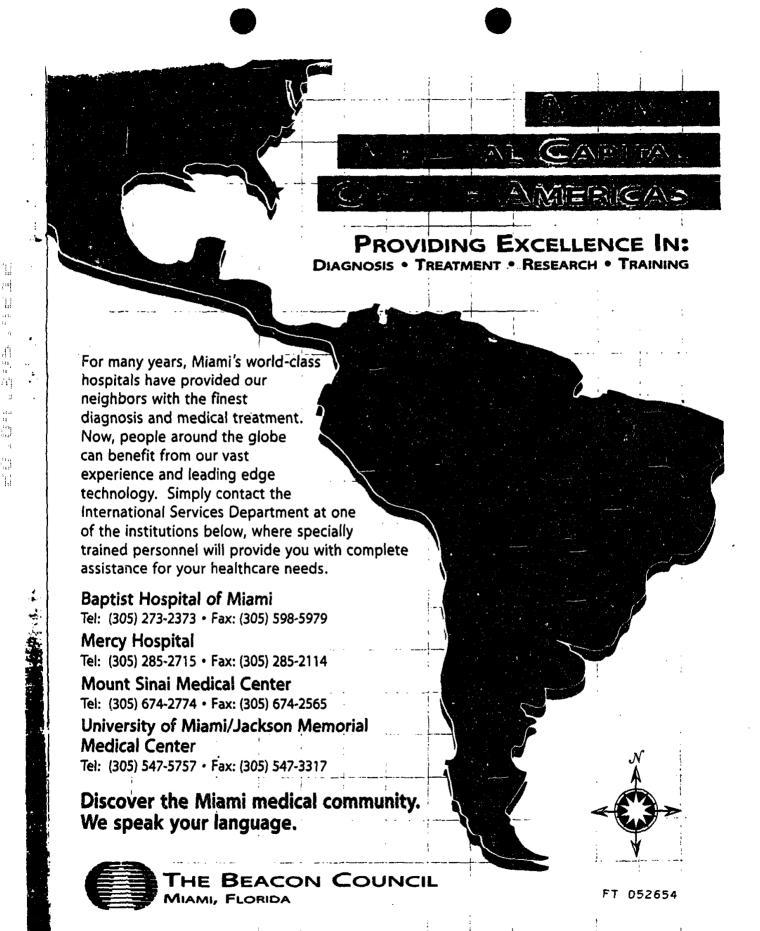

Some local hospitals already are boostir their overseas income. Mercy Hospital steadily expanding its foreign busines which now represents about five percent, the hospital's total revenue. "South ar Central Americans are shopping for U, health care as never before," says F Rosasco, president of Mercy.

The overall aim of the Caracas missic is selling Miami as a patient destinatio "We're not selling any one institution says Brian Keeley, chief executive offic of Baptist Hospital. "We're selling Miamas the only place you need to go for a kind of health care."

Keeley says the globalization of busine has created a new class of high-incompatients in such countries as Chil Argentina and Brazil. "A lot of these peor are international corporate executives where the comment of the United States of terriary medical care," he says.

Baptist has gone to great lengths to cast to Latin Americans. Among other service the hospital will arrange tempora housing for a patient's family and friend provide ground transportation, off trilingual concierge service — Englis Spanish and Portuguese — and evachedule a few rounds of golf.

Miami's financial services industry becomes more sophisticated as Latin America experiences fresh economic growth ose Suquet runs a large Equitable insurance agency in Miami with 250 full-time agents. Much of his firm's financial planning, estate nning and dollar-based insurance is wided to citizens of Aggentine, Equator.

planning and dollar-based insurance is provided to citizens of Argentina, Ecuador, Mexico, Venezuela and other Latin nations.

In years past, Suquet's clients came to Miami primarily for vacation and shopping trips. Their investments in Miami generally were limited to condominium apartments. Lately, however, many of his Latin clients have been taking a bigger stake in Miami.

"It used to be just residences," Suquet says, "but now they actually have ongoing businesses here, and some of them are using Miami as a springboard to open up markets in the United States for their products."

That's just one illustration of the international influence in Miami's financial services industry. Another is the rapid growth of trade financing in Miami.

"Trade financing is becoming one of our growth areas, primarily with exporters and importers which are in the range of $1 million to $20 million in annual sales," says Carlos Palomares, a native of Cuba who serves as president of New York-based Citibank's Florida operation.

Palomares, a native of Cuba, has worked for Citibank in Greece, Saudi Arabia, Italy and the Phillipines. "Miami is very much an international city," says Palomares. "It has a strong Latin influence, but we also see the European influence coming in strongly now."

A recent example of Eastern European influence: Billionaire George Soros, a native of Hungary, has made several major investments in Dade County real estate, including the purchase of equity interests in two high-rise apartment buildings with a combined total of nearly 1,000 units.

Evidence of Asian influence in Miami is also abundant. There are nearly 60 Taiwanese companies in Greater Miami. China's share of goods coming into the Miami Free Trade Zone tripled between 1933 and 1992. Hong Kong is the largest supplier of products imported into the Port of Miami.

"Trade financing is sophisticated banking," says Wilbur Bascom, chief of the international bureau of the Florida Division of Banking. "It enhances the quality of banking services in Florida."

Now that capital is flowing into rapidly developing Latin economies, trade financing is surging. "All of the banks have been very actively pursuing trade financing with Latin America," says Fernando Capablanca, president of the state-licensed Miami branch of Extebandes, a bank based in Venezuela.

At the end of 1993, outstanding loans at state-licensed agencies of foreign banks in Florida totaled $5.6 billion, up 16 percent from a year earlier, according to the Florida Division of Banking. State officials said most of the increase came from a sharp rise in trade financing.

Major U.S. banks are becoming more active in trade financing, too. "I see Miami's economy becoming much more international all the time," says Adolfo Henriquez, head of the Miami office of NationsBank.

"Our international business is the fastest-growing group of any of our business lines," says William R. Myers, president and chief executive officer of Barnett Bank of South Florida. "We are bullish on most economies in Central and South America, and on Mexico."

"International deposits make up about 20 to 25 percent of our deposit base in Miami," says Carl Mentzer, president of SunBank/Miami. The bank's international department provides money management to foreign clients and trade financing to Miami companies. But you also find plenty of international business in the bank's trust and mortgage departments. "For us in Miami, international business isn't something that just happens in the international department," Mentzer says.

"We have a large international banking practice," says Carlos Migoya, president of First Union National Bank in Dade County. Some Latin Americans moved deposits from Miami banks to Latin banks in 1993, but Miami bankers started to see a fresh inflow of funds from Latin America in early 1994, Migoya says. "That happens all the time. You get swings," he says. "You have a coup or a bank failure in Latin America, then people in some countries get nervous and start exporting their capital."

The securities brokerage industry also sees Miami as a good place to pick up clients and manage money. Baring Brothers, an international securities brokerage headquartered in London, has launched Baring Latin American Capital Management, a stock mutual fund that is managed in Miami. Funds are invested in high-quality, privately held companies in Latin America.

GREATER MANG CONVENTIONS & VISIT Over 5,500 financial institutions call Microsi home

t the recent annual convention of the National Association of Television Programming Executives (NATPE) in Miami Beach, scores of TV stars made personal appearances while, behind closed doors, TV producers sold millions of dollars of programming to broadcast stations, cable systems and other buyers—and this year, much of the wheeling and dealing was done in Spanish. Many of the 13,000 NATPE convention delegates were Hispanic TV professionals based in Miami

"Miami is becoming the Spanish Hollywood," says Robert Behar, president and CEO of Hero Productions, a company that sells film and video services such as satellite uplinks and studio rentals. "There are more Spanish soap operas being produced in Miami than anywhere else."

Media and entertainment in Miami are export-driven industries with huge potential. "It's a very significant sector of the Miami economy," says John Anderson, president of the Beacon Council, "and its unlimited in its growth potential here."

Many of the telenovelas produced in Miami come from Telemundo and Univision, the top Spanish-language TV networks in the U.S. But lately, Spanish TV business activity in Miami has been expanding far beyond Telemundo and Univision, creating new opportunities for South Florida's fledgling entertainment industry.

Consider MTV Latino, the new Spanish-language version of MTV, launched in October 1993 and based in Miami Beach. Sarah Levinson, executive vice president of MTV Networks, says MTV Latino's need for music videos probably will boost video production work in South Florida — good news for film companies such as Forti/Layne Associates of Miami, which has won contracts to produce videos for Miami singers Jon Secada and Gloria Estefan.

Other cable TV producers with Spanish shows coming from Miami include The Discovery Channel, which transmits over a fiber optic link running from its new production center in Miami Beach to a satellite uplink facility near Miami International Airport, where Discovery's signal is beamed to cable customers in Latin America.

Launched in the Miami area, Gems Television is a one-year-old cable network with a mix of Spanish-language soap operas, movies and talks shows aimed at Hispanic women. Today the 24-hour daily show is seen in 18 countries — mostly in Latin America, but also in a growing number of U.S. markets. Two cable giants, TCI and Cox, are now showing Gems in U.S. test markets.

The president of Gems Television, Gary McBride, recently moved his staff of 40 from 6,000 cramped square feet in Opa-locka to a new 12,000-square-foot operations center in Miramar, which houses a fully licensed teleport capable of beaming video to any domestic of international satellite in the sky. The company's total capital investment in the new center will top $30 million, McBride said

In January, McBride was preparing to acquire a fancy General Instruments system that can digitally compress the Gems satellite signal — thus freeing up channel space for a second Spanishlanguage network. The subject? Hispanic children's programming might work well as the content for a second cable network, McBride says.

And where would he find the extra personnel for a second network? Probably in South Florida. "There has been a good base of talent here to draw from," McBride says. "Of the 40 people I have, everybody but two came from Telemundo or Univision."

Around town, it seems like a new movie is being made every day in Miami. Last year, about $11 million was spent in South Florida during the filming of "Ace Ventura, Pet Detective," a movie starring comedian Jim Carrey. Feature films shot in Miami in 1994 include "The Specialist," starring actor Sylvestor Stallone and actress Sharon Stone. Also this year, Paramount Pictures filmed "Drop Zone," an action thriller, and "The Perez Family," adapted from a novel about a Cuban exile family in Miami.

moved from Los Angeles to Coral Gables — and quickly learned to appreciate the lower cost of living in South Florida.

"I sold my condo in Los Angeles for more money than I paid for my single-family home in Coral Gables," Torno says. "I love living here. I've lived all over the country, and outside of the country, and I hope this will be my permanent home. The business climate is fabulous. It's a growth location for the next several years, in all regards."

Mark Liberman is an avid runner. He can cover up to 30 miles a week. When he lived in Chicago, however, winter weather often kept him inside. Now that he's working in Miami as vice president, Latin America, for United Airlines, 47-year-old Liberman runs year-round.

He and his wife moved to the Miami area in 1992, the year United launched an expansion of service to Latin America and created its Miami-based Latin America division. United now offers 31 daily departures from Miami International Airport to cities in Argentina, Brazil, Mexico and Venezuela, and in Central America and the Caribbean.

"The future is very, very bright because we have been successful with our venture into Latin America," Liberman says. "As we see opportunities, we continue to add lift."

member of the board of the Miami-based New World Symphony. With his help, the symphony will be flown by United to four South American cities for a November 1994 concert tour.

Whether it's the performing arts or professional football, Miami has a wide variety of qualities that make living there something special — starting with a great climate.

Year-round, the average high temperature in Miami is 83 degrees, the average low 68 degrees. In this subtropical marine environment, there is sunshine virutally every day. Natural treasures abound, including 84 miles of Atlantic coastline, pristine beaches, more than 670 parks, and the Everglades, one of the nation's largest wildlife preserves.

Outdoor recreation happens everywhere in Miami, not just on the beach. Just ask Glendon Johnson, chief executive officer of John Alden, a Miami-based insurance company with more than $1.4 billion in annual revenues. A native of Utah who grew up on a ranch, Johnson unwinds on weekends by riding horses near his home in western Dade County.

Many of Miami's biggest corporations—including John Alden, fast food giant Burger King, newpaper publisher Knight-Ridder, and Ryder System, the truck rental company—make huge contributions to the quality of life in South Florida.

For example, John Alden invests heavily in training its employees. "More than 50 percent of our people are taking some kind of professional training or education course," Johnson says. "If they take it and pass it, we'll pay for it."

thousands of Miamians a competitive edge in the global marketplace. About 100,000 students are enrolled in the major institutions of higher learning in Dade County.

The University of Miami is one of only three universities in the U.S. that offers a graduate degree that combines an MBA with an international studies degree, and requires an overseas internship.

Ambler Moss, dean of the graduate school of international studies at the University of Miami, says UM gives academic credits to students who study at more than four dozen universities around the world. "We have an academic exchange program with 54 foreign universities in Europe, Latin America, even as far away as Australia," he says.

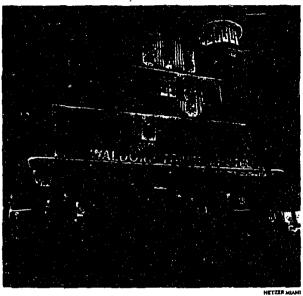

Today's college graduates may help clean up Latin ecosystems in future years. "Many countries in Latin America are going to be faced with cleaning up their environment, and I think we have the technical expertise here to help," says Dr. John Cordrey, chief economist at the Beacon Council, the leading economic development agency for Dade County. Cordrey noted the high quality of the oceanographic and marine sciences center at the University of Miami's marine sciences.

Hospitality management, business administration and Latin American and Caribbean studies are just of few of the widely recognized programs at Florida International University. Started in 1972, more than 22,000 students are enrolled at the university — consistently named "One of America's Best Colleges" by the magazine U.S. News & World Report.

When it's time for a study break, many students head for South Miami Beach—a fashionable entertainment district is undergoing a wave of building renovation, and is attracting everyone from super models to movie stars.

All types of restaurants are popping up in Miami Beach, serving up a variety of fare including French, Jamaican, Cuban, Italian, as well as savory sub-tropical specialties such as grilled swordfish with mango sauce. The variety of choices seems limitiess. In a recent six-month period, 30 new restaurants were opened in Miami Beach.

In addition, boutiques selling apparel, furnishings, jewelry are springing up in "SoBe" next to to art galleries, book stores and coffee houses.

Celebrities mix with models on fashionable South Beach, also known as "SoBe." Internationally recognized fashion designer Giannai Versace has a spectacular personal residence on Ocean Drive. Singer Gloria Estefan has several restaurants on South Beach and a personal residence in nearby Star Island, a few doors down from Miami Heat basketball star Rony Seikaly.

Sports is an important element of Miami's growing entertainment industry. The city is now home to the NBA's Miami Heat, the NFL's Miami Dolphins, Major League Baseball's Florida Marlins and the National Hockey League's Florida Panthers.

The internationally recognized Lipton Championships tennis tournament brings the best players in the world to Key Biscayne, a beautiful island nestled in Biscayne Bay, just south of downtown Miami. For the first time, in 1994, the tournament was played a new $20 million stadium.

Other major annual sports events include the Miami Grand Prix auto race, the Doral Ryder Open professional golf tournament, the Orange Bowl college football championship. And coming in January 1995: the National Football League's 28th Super Bowl, at Joe Robbie Stadium.

Under its chairman, Wayne Huizenga, Blockbuster Entertainment Corp., a major video rental company based in South Florida, is planning to develop a 2,000-acre entertainment park in the northwest portion of the Greater Miami area. The park is lakely to include a hockey stadium for the Florida Panthers and a baseball stadium for the Florida Marlins. Huizenga owns the Marlins and the Panthers, and has agreed to acquire the Miami Dolphins.

Modern Miami would have been tough for William Pruitt to foresee as a boy growing up. He was born in Miami. Today he is managing partner in Miami for the Arthur Andersen accounting firm, in charge of the firm's operations in Florida, Puerro Rico and Venezuela.

He says things have changed dramatically in his hometown — and for the better. "In the old days, it was a tourist town," Pruitt says. "Now it's grown into an international city. I've never lived anywhere else, and hopefully I'll never have to. I love it here."

Film festival fever continues into the fall with the Jewish Film Festival.

Music strikes a chord with Pops By the Bay which fills three weekends in July with performances by the Florida Philharmonic Orchestra and headline entertainers. Music is also the focus of August's Miami Reggae Festival. This popular two-day celebration of music and culture showcases rhythms of the Caribbean and commemorates Jamaican independence.

In October, the Caribbean American Carnival fills Bicentennial Park with Soca and Calypso, vibrant colorful costumes and non-stop dancing.

Festivals also wrap themselves around major sporting events. In January, Greater Miami and the Beaches plays host to Superbowl XXIX. The Florida Derby Festival is a week-long series of sports and cultural events. The Orange Bowl Festival runs from December to February. Activities include a sailing regatta, an international tennis tournament, fashion show and luncheon, the nationallytelevised 'King Orange Jamboree Parade, a 10-K race and, of course,

The visual and performing arts take the spotlight along the city's venerable Lincoln Road Mall, home to the Colony Theater. The New World Symphony and the Lincoln Theatre. The Goombay Festival salutes the Bahamian heritage of Miami's first black settlers. The King Mango Strut is a playful parody of the annual Orange Bowl festivities. OPA-LOCKA

Opa-locka was the inspiration of aviator Glenn Curtiss, a developer committed to architecturally themed communities. Prompted by Curtiss vision, architect Bernhardt Muller wove the story of The One Thousand and One Tales from The Arabian Nights into this community incorporated in 1926. The main streets, laid out in the shape of a crescent moon, are named for characters in the book.

The City's Moorish motif is best exemplified in its larger scale buildings such as Opa-focka City Hall, but even the area's homes sport minarets and domes. This community celebrates its special character at the annual Arabian Nights Festival.

HOMESTEAD

Homestead is a city not content to rest on its laurels. In August 1992, this community faced its greatest challenge — Hurricane Andrew. The unique spirit and commitment of its residents toward the rebuilding effort have resulted in a city more vital than ever, and one that entices visitors with many options.

Homestead is strategically located between two unique ecological preserves—Biscayne National Underwaler Park and the Everglades National Park. Its fertile fields have produced abundant options for sampling nature's gifts. The Fruit & Spice Park, the only one of its kind, is a living museum of fruit, nut and spice-producing plants from around the world. Another attraction, Coral Casile, allows visitors to see an engineering marvel carved from 1,000 tons of coral rock. And the Homestead Sports Complex, one of the finest spring training facilities in the country, is the site for the National Baseball Team Trials.

In contrast to the cosmopolitan character of Miami, Homestead conveys a small town feeling, reminiscent of earlier days.

OVERTOWN

The 1988 opening of the Miami's Arena, home court to Greater Miami's NBA team, the Miami Heat, as well as the NHL's Florida Panthers, marked a significant first step in the revitalization of this once thriving area. GREATER MIAMI SOUTH

;.i

From first-rate shopping and dining to leisurely outdoor entertainment, the thriving communities of Greater Miami South embrace the best of country and city living.

A drive down South Dixie Highway (U.S. 1) leads to South Miami, a premier residential area. The city's Bakery Centre, an eye-catching landmark, is home to the nationally recognized Miami Youth Museum which features hands-on exhibits that introduce children to the cultural arts.

A popular drawing card of the Kendall area is the landscaped shopping attraction, The Falls, and one of South Florida's largest malls, Dadeland. A myriad of dining possibilities complement the community's treasure trove of marketplaces.

Just south of Kendall lie the residential neighborhoods of Perrine and Cutter Ridge, originally christened "big hunting ground" by the Seminole Indians. A series of parks preserve the communities' environmental heritage and nature paths lead to inviting waters for canceing and swimming. A county golf course, softball diamonds and "tor centers add to recreational options.

County parks are only some of the area's alternatives for nature enthusiasts. Popular attractions double as showcases for Greater Miami's distinctive flora and fauna. Parrot Jungle is a tropical garden sheltering a dizzying array of colorful parrots, macaws, cockatoos and flamingos. Monkey Jungle is home to hundreds of transplanted monkeys, apes and trained chimpanzees.

At Miarni Metrozoo, African grazing animals lope across a miniature Serengeti Plain while kangaroos frolic. In all, 290 acres of jungles, forests and trails replicate the natural habitats of the 100 species of wild animals.

GREATER MIAMI NORTH

In Greater Miami North, luxury highrises and suburban developments rub shoulders with established communities. Pro football, baseball and parimutuels add excitement white parks and marinas offer natural beauty.

Hugging the northwest corner of the Palmetto Expressway's "big bend" is the planned community of Miami Lakes, developed by Senator Bob Graham and his family. Golf courses and area country are but a nine iron from the eclectic array of shops on Main Street. The communities of North Miami and North Miami Beach offer the enjoyable pastimes of neighborhood parks, shopping, and attractions, and are a haven for fine dining.

The hometown football team, the Miami Dolphins, and the newest addition to the Baseball National League, the Florida Marlins, will continue to dominate the action at Joe Robbie Stadium. Thundering thoroughbreds roow with the best at Gulfstream Park, home of the Florida Derby. A more peaceful setting awaits at the Ancient Spanish Monastery. First built in Segovia, Spain in 1141, the monument was resurrected by local developers in 1954.

Residential villages with names like Morningside. Miami Shores, El Portal and Biscayne Park offer their own brands of peaceful solitude.

The history of Miami's African American, Bahamian, Jamaican and Haitian communities is preserved in the Black Archives History and Research Foundation of South Florida, located in Liberty City. Art lovers will find themselves enriched by a visit to COCA, the North Miami Center for Contemporary Art.

Exclusive resorts, residences and marinas comprise fashionable Aventura. Aventura Mall makes its own fashion statement with major national retailers and boutiques. A short drive east across the William Lehman Causeway brings visitors in full view of the Attantic Ocean. Along Collins Avenue, the oceanfront communities of Sunny Isles Beach and Golden Beach are lined with broad, sandy beaches, the area's playgrounds in the sun.

Dear Mark,

I write on behalf of Mrs. Wang as well as myself to thank you for your hospitality for inviting us to Miami and to Paraguay. I have now returned to Hong Kong after spending a week in Buenos Aires while Mrs. Wang is still traveling.

We enjoyed very much for this extraordinary trip and the meeting President Wasmosy and various government officials. We are amazed of the many investment opportunities in Paraguay.

We are also particularly grateful for the hospitality of Ambassador Carlos Abrille for his taking us to Argentina.

I now return you the two unused air tickets from Asuncion to Miami for your attention and copies of Forbes Magazine, World Woman Today, a CNN interview and New York Times for your leisure viewing.

I wish to thank you again and hope to seeing each other very soon.

With best regards,

Yours sincerely,

Re:- Cash Sponsorship for the Western Hemisphere Trade Ministerial and Commerce Forum.

Dear Mr. Jimenez:

On behalf of the Florida Partnership of the Americas, I want to thank you for agreeing to serve as a sponsor of the Western Hemisphere Ministerial Trade and Commerce Forum to be held in Denver, Colorado on June 29 - July 2, 1995.

I would also like to take this opportunity to outline our understanding of your sponsorship. In appreciation of your sponsorship, we hope to give your organization the appropriate recognition. Receipt of your signature on this letter will allow our acceptance of your sponsorship. As we have explained fully, because of the nature of the Forum, the Florida Partnership of the Americas has not and cannot promise you anything in return for your sponsorship. You also understand that you cannot promote yourself as an official donor to, or as an official sponsor of. the Western Hemisphere Trade Ministerial and Commerce Forum.

The Florida Partnership of the Americas only accepts sponsorship on a nonpreferential basis. In that regard, we understand that you have no matters pending for a decision before the President of the United States, the United States Department of Commerce, the Office of the United States Trade Representative, or the Denver Host Committee and you are not likely to have any such matters in the near future. However, if any such matters do unexpectedly arise, please notify me immediately so that I can pass that information to our Federal Government cosponsor as appropriate. Finally, it is our understanding that you have committed to a cash contribution in the amount of $100,000.

In the spirit of making sure that you understand the nature of your sponsorship, I ask that you sign and return this letter to me as soon as possible.

Re: Reception with Vice President Al Gore

5:00 p.m. - 7:00 p.m., Saturday, December 9, 1995

Pountainbleau Hilton - Miami Beach

Dear Mr. Jimenez:

Thank you for your generous support of the Florida Democratic Party by your contribution of $5,000.00. After our conversation, I spoke with our mutual good friend, Howard Glicken, and told him of your kindness. He asked that I relay his thanks to you and if there is anything he may do to help facilitate this, please give him a call.

Corporate, PAC, personal or partnership checks can be made payable to The Florida Democratic party. For your convenience, please call Bonnie McNair at (305) 525-9900, and she will send a messenger to pick up the check.

Vice President Al Gore is scheduled to address the Florida Democratic Convention on Saturday, December 9, 1995 at 4:30 p.m., at the Fountainbleau Hotel in North Miami Beach. As we discussed, the Florida Party will host a private reception for the Vice President immediately prior to his address to the Convention.

Florida is a key link in the re-election efforts of President Clinton and Vice President Gore. I know the Governor, the Lt. Governor and the statewide elected officials greatly appreciate your efforts. The current commercials featuring the President being shown in Florida, which are, in part, paid for by the Florida Democratic Party, must continue, in order to build the foundation for a coordinated campaign in the fall of 1996. It is most critical that we have the necessary funds in order to wage a coordinated campaign in Florida, and show the President and Vice President our strong support. Your money will be used for this coordinated campaign effort.

Again, thank you for your generous support.

very stuly yours,

Mitchell W. Berger

Gary Aragon
Summit of the Americas
175 NW First Avenue
Miami, FL 33128

Dear Mr. Aragon:

It was a pleasure meeting with you today. I feel much more informed about the program and the opportunity that surround the Summit. In order to clarify our discussion of today, I would like to recap my understanding regarding the information presented and highlight a few key points that were not discussed.

1. Future Tech would arrange computer products under the Mark Vision brand in 9 business centers. These centers would be established in hotels designated by the Summit committee and be assigned by the end of this month.

Questions & Concerns regarding the centers:

- will equal space (square footage) be supplied to each of the 3 contributors
- where within the hotel will the center be located.
- what additional logistics are required if any: will hotel provide tables, dcsks, etc.
- signage at each center will be of equal proportion to each of the 3 contributors

It will be important to have the event coordinator of the other 2 parties and hotel as soon as possible. This will-ensure a smooth and trouble free installation.

- 2. The centers are to be operational by December 6th or 7th.
- 3. The centers will service 33 delegations. The Summit Committee will inform Future Tech of the number of delegations to be serviced at each location. Future Tech will supply the Committee with the proposed equipment that will be utilized at each location. In addition, Future Tech will provide a notebook computer to each delegation. The Summit will attempt to arrange that this notebook is utilized by a high ranking official of the delegation.
- 4. Future Tech will be provided with exhibition space of up to 40 x 40 at the Grove convention center on Friday (private exhibition for attending delegations) & Saturday (general attendance). The logistical support and details regarding this event will be distributed by the end of this month. As a Diamond Sponsor, Future Tech will be provided a primary choice of size and location.

- 5. Future Tech will also provide Mr. Lauredo with a Notebook within the next two weeks for use in Summit activities.
- 6. Based on Cash and merchandise contribution, Future Tech will qualify under the Diamond Sponsorship. The Diamond sponsorship will encompass all the benefits that was presented in the package received today.

Questions:

- How many Future Tech delegates or guests can attend each event:

Special seminars

Reception #1

Satellite Dinner (Friday)

Kennedy Center Gala & Reception (Saturday)

- 7. Future Tech will be allowed to use the Summit logo at no additional charge providing it is used within the guidelines presented by the Committee.
- 8. The Summit Committee will review the use of the following verbiage:
 - On December 9 11th, the Summit of the Americas was held in Miami and Mark Vision Computers was there.
 - MarkVision Computers was used by the 33 visiting delegations during the Summit of the Americas
 - The computing power centers servicing the needs of the 33 visiting delegations was supported through MarkVision Computers.
 - The visiting delegations of 33 Latin American countries carried a Mark Vision computer during the Summit of the Americas.
 - Much of the business correspondence prepared during the Summit of the Americas was done on a MarkVision Computer.
 - A MarkVision Computer was the choice of many of the delegates at the Summit of the Americas

This represents the type of information we would like to used upon the completion of the Summit.

9. At this point in time the business centers will be supported by:

MarkVision for Computer Products Xerox for Copying and Fax needs AT&T for Telecommunications

10. Currently, IBM will be supplying computer products for the media center.

11. Future Tech will be provided with the guidelines to be utilized for signage at each business center. This should be provided during the next two weeks. As per our discussion no reasonable signage would be withheld.

Once again, I would like to thank you for the time we spent reviewing the situation. I will have Dr. Jimenez review the two letters presented today and respond as soon as possible. If there is any item listed within this letter that does not represent our discussion please notify me at once.

Sincerely

Louis Leonardo
